For each of the three years 1956 through 1958 Michigan was able, with a determined traffic safety program to report a 10 percent decrease in traffic deaths, below the previous year. And in 1959 we were rated first among the major industrial states in pedestrian safety.

Late in 1959 we had more good news for our 4,000,000 licensed drivers. The National Safety Council reported Michigan was tied for first place with neighboring Ohio as the safest of the seven largest industrial states, measured in traffic deaths per billion miles of travel.

Responsible factors in our highway safety gains include our statewide speed limit law — 65 by day and 55 by night — in effect since Feb. 3, 1959... our high school driver education classes, first in the nation to be made available for every high school student... an expanded state police highway patrol, augmented by sheriff's patrols and on-highway holidays by Michigan National Guard troops... continued concentration on the safety factor in highway engineering... the expanded road building program, by counties and cities as well as by the state highway department... a statewide safety publicity campaign... elimination of delinquent drivers, through license revocation and suspension... and establishment in 1955 of the Highway Traffic Safety Center at Michigan State University, another Michigan first.

Besides its highway patrol work, for safety promotion and traffic law enforcement, the Michigan State Police — unlike state-troop organizations in some of the other states — has full police powers and handles all types of criminal cases.

Among the first to use scientific techniques in the solution of particularly baffling crimes, it is recognized as one of the most highly trained and efficient police organizations in the country.

Our state police was the first statewide law-enforcing agency in the nation to use radio communication. It also pioneered in the use of police aircraft (now equipped with three planes, based at Lansing, Traverse City and Marquette)... and in the use of the polygraph (lie detector)... and a number of other scientific and technical aids for solving crimes.

Within recent years, troopers who are expert skin divers have been assigned to each of the organization's eight districts to assist with underwater recovery of criminal evidence and to locate bodies of drowned persons.

Michigan State Police headquarters in East Lansing has the biggest file of fingerprints of any law enforcement agency in the United States other than the FBI collection in Washington. The Michigan file has been maintained since 1917.

For many years penologists in other states have regarded Michigan as a leader in developing a progressive corrections system.

Our 1937 law centralizing the administration of parole and probation and the operation of our penal institutions and prison industries in one corrections department under a bi-partisan commission was widely hailed as model legislation.

Since its enactment, our non-political parole board has achieved one of the lowest rates of returned prisoners in the country.

Michigan was also among the first states in 1902 to enact a probation law, giving persons convicted of lesser crimes a second chance before sending them to prison. Progress in that phase of correction technique led to the establishment in 1958 of Camp Pugsley, near Traverse City, the nation's first state-operated probation camp for youths up to 22 years of age, offering vocational training and outdoor work under conservation department supervision for young offenders who, in the opinion of the sentencing judge lack suitable probation opportunities in their home communities.

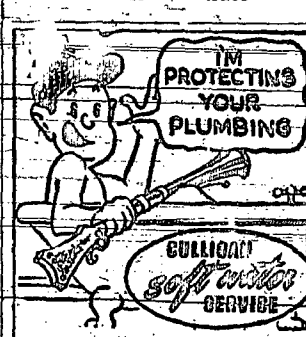

Moreover, our corrections department pioneered in 1948 in establishing a "conservation work camps, in which, trusted older prisoners are assigned to special camps to work on improving state parks and recreational areas. Indicative of the success of the plan in "rehabilitating" prisoners, furthering the services of our conservation department, we now have 12 of these camps.

A Fateful Decision . . .

From now until November this country will be treated — or, perhaps, "subjected" would be the better word — to massive doses of political maneuvering. That always happens in an election year. But this year, in the view of most observers, the stakes are higher than ever — and the campaigning will be more aggressive and more bitter.

On the Republican side, the odds are very long against any surprises. Mr. Nixon, barring some development or event that is beyond anticipation now, has the nomination. The only question is whom he will favor or the second spot on the ticket. It is true that Rockefeller supporters are still active, despite the Governor's formal withdrawal. But this seems a last ditch affair, with small prospects of success.

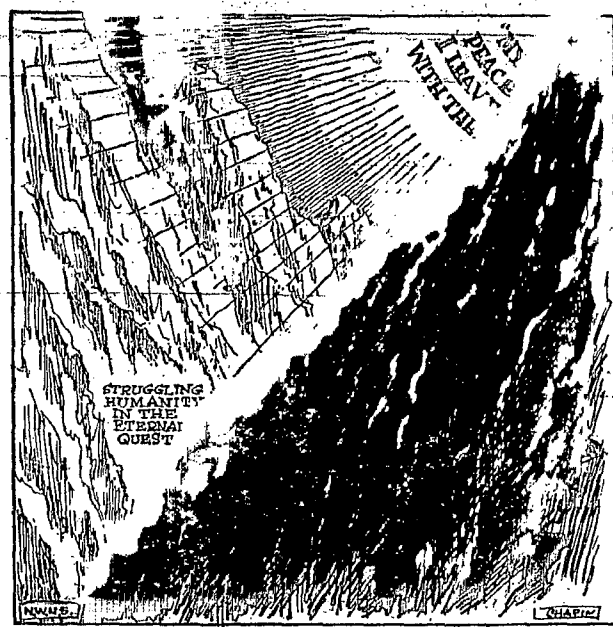

Of the Democrats, Senator Kennedy undoubtedly has the lead. But there are dangers as well as advantages in being a front-runner early in the game — he automatically becomes the one to draw the bead on, and a stumble can be fatal. No one ever campaigned harder than Senator Humphrey, the other avowed candidate, but his prospects are considered much poorer than Kennedy's.

Back of these headline-seizers are other men, more or less quietly watching and waiting for what could prove to be the main chance. Senator Johnson is one. Senator Symington is another. And no one should write off Adlai Stevenson, despite his carefully and mildly phrased "I am not a candidate" statements. Mr. Stevenson has a hard and sizeable core of supporters who sincerely and passionately regard him as just what the country needs at this juncture in history.

We will see debate on the domestic issues, many of them hardy perennials — public power, grants-in-aid to the states, federal support of education, varying philosophies of taxation, and so on. But these, possibly if not probably, may be overshadowed to the point of disappearance by the life-and-death issue — the national defense, in all its many and confused ramifications. And it is that possibility which gives the highest importance to the campaigning of this year, and to what will happen on November 2nd.

The President, with burning sincerity, has assured the country that our defense posture is adequate, and that we will not be left in the lurch in the race with Russia. Distinguished authorities agree with him, and there is evidence of both a factual and theoretical nature to back up the position. Mr. Nixon, as his apparatus, is committed to this view in general, and his recent statements have been in accord with Presidential policy and attitude.

But other sincere and distinguished authorities see matters very differently. As Newsweek writes, the men who testified before Congress on defense during a late week "were not politicians with a partisan axe to grind. Nor were they generals trying to pry more money out of Congress for their own branch of the service. Instead, they were men from the conservative Republican community — men who have given their support to Dwight Eisenhower and have in turn enjoyed his confidence and admiration. . . . And, while the words they chose to express their sincere views might vary, they all came to the same conclusion: The U. S. defense effort is inadequate." One of these men, for instance, was formerly Secretary of Defense and Under Secretary of State. Another was co-chairman of the Gaither Committee. That committee's exhaustive report on defense has never been made public, but news of its gist has leaked out, and the picture painted is a dark one.

The non-political views of these men will be grist for the political mill. The Democrats will attack — the Republicans will defend. And that imposes a heavy burden on an electorate which has no means of determining with any degree of exactitude who is wrong and who is right. Yet a decision has to be made — and it may be, one way or another, a decision which will shape the future of the world.

Robert Jensen 10 year old pupil at the Richardson school, won first prize of $2.50 and third prize of $1.00 with his entries in the annual Crawford County Bird House contest. Bernard Palmer, 14 years old, of the Benedict school, placed second. Honorable mention was given to Robert Olsen, Robert Exley, Floyd Millikin and Florence Wolf of Love school; Thomas Manier and Kellis Charron of Frederic; Francis G. Annis of the Benedict school; Jack Hull and Bobby Clark of Grayling and Bobby Flory. Judging points were as follows: Proper design as follows, entrance, clean out, color, size for bird, perch where needed, number of rooms for specified bird; workmanship, age of maker; amount of outside help received; and originality. The first, second and third prize winners of Crawford county will be entered in the Tri-County contest to be held this week at Lake City. Counties participating are Roscommon, Missaukee and Crawford.

A bill is before the legislature providing for the opening of several counties for deer hunting with bows and arrows 10 days immediately preceding the regular open deer hunting season. Recently Senator Miles Callaghan who is always watching out for the interests of the counties in his district, phoned the writer asking if the people of this county wished to be included in the list. After a lot of consultation with many interested local parties it was determined that this county should not take on this proposed plan, and instead that local sportsmen would prefer to watch developments in other counties. It is hardly likely that many deer would be killed with arrows and the kill would hardly be noticed among the large number of deer in this county.

done during the winter months.

"Happy birthday to you" was the motive behind the delightful supper party given by Mrs. Emil Giegling Sunday evening for the pleasure of Mrs. Stanley Stealy and Emil Giegling. Contract bridge followed, with the high scores being held by Mrs. Margrethe Bauman and Roy Milnes.

Instead of one big camp of the Michigan National Guard, the state military will assemble at Grayling in three divisions this year, according to a plan already approved by the state military board.

Mrs. E. S. Houghton of Lovells visited her husband here on Monday. Mr. Houghton, replacing Mr. County treasurer. They have rented the O. Palmer house, that was recently purchased from and occupied by H. C. Holbrook and family, and will move to Grayling just as soon as it can be made ready for them.

Long, both of Frederic, was solemnized at the parsonage by the Rev. V. J. Hutton.

Upon the application of Frank Freeland, who lost the election for highway commissioner to E. A. Corsaut by one vote, the ballots were recounted, with no change in the result.

There are going to be a number of improvements in the local green house. R. Hanson, who purchased the property of J. H. Cook April 1st, says that it will be enlarged to a capacity that will supply all needs for Grayling and surrounding towns.

The C. W. Ward property at Lovells is reported to have been sold to the members of the "Underhill" club.

T. E. Douglas is getting ready for business at his North Branch fishing resort at Lovells. He also has a new auto coming for transfer purposes.

School notes - Lorne Douglas, Augusta, Ga., Glenn K. Ebert, and Marguerite Chamberlin were high school visitors on Friday.

Fern Armstrong, Hulda Silvals and Emerson Bates gave a complimentary rendering from the scene from "The Goodbye Girl" at the art exhibit. The exhibit, which was held just before vacation, netted the schools $57.80 for the picture fund.

Frederic has voted $1,000 as a dividend fund to build what is needed in town and the remainder, if any, to extend toward the community.

Mrs. W. Callahan, will have charge of the Commercial hotel in Frederic. Mrs. Long moves to Flint this week where she will keep a hotel.

In Many Ways

1960 CENSUS IMPORTANT

On April 1, 1960, some 100,000 enumerators will set out to visit the U.S. households which have already received in the mail advance copies of the Census Report form. These enumerators will transcribe from the Advance Census Report to their own official schedules the information supplied by the householders. At every fourth house, a Census Household Questionnaire will be left. On this form the householder will be asked to report more detailed information about members of the household and about the dwelling unit. An envelope will also be left, so that the questionnaire can be mailed, postage free, to the local Census District Office within three days.

After the census has been completed, the District Supervisors will announce preliminary census population totals for the counties and place of more than 10,000 population in their district. These announcements will be made during late April and May. Final total population figures for each State will be transmitted by the Secretary of Commerce to the President no later than December 1, 1960.

The State population totals will provide the basis for reapportionment of Congressmen among the various States. . . but this is not the only reason for a census. The data are basic to much of the planning of governmental agencies at all levels - Federal, State and local governmental units - for schools, highways, hospitals, sanitation, police and fire protection, to name but a few areas of importance.

Michigan School Curriculum Improvement Receiving Attention

Improvement of the curriculum in Michigan schools is receiving more attention today than ever before.

Advent of the "space age" among other things, has resulted in increased interest in what subjects should be taught in schools.

With society getting more complex every year, there is a growing feeling among educators that the traditional three "R's" must be updated to meet today's needs.

Actually, Michigan has had a curriculum planning program for nearly 25 years.

ation for instruction specialists and regional services. Wider representation on state curriculum committees. Chatterton feels the DPI could do a much better job if it had more money to spend on the program.

"Funds should be made available to the Department of Public Instruction so that it can step up its co-operative effort with local schools in establishing some minimum state standards through consultants and course of study guides," Chatterton said.

THIS YEAR'S MICHIGAN WEEK celebration is shaping up as the biggest in the seven-year history of the event.

committee workers over a year ago. This year's State Chairman, T. Austin Saunders of Muskegon, president of General Telephone Co., of Michigan, has traveled thousands of miles during the last 10 months to help organize Michigan Week committees in each of the 83 counties.

"Michigan - Your Opportunity" is this year's slogan while special emphasis is being placed on "People of Michigan."

Accomplishments of Michigan Week since 1954 have been many, but one that stands out above all others is the tremendous interest it has created among Michigan school children for more knowledge about their native state.

Today's high school graduate knows more about Michigan and has more reason to be proud of that than ever before.

Word has been received here by relatives of the death of Miss Hazel Stephan on April 2nd, in Jackson, at the age of 62. She was ill for seven weeks with the flu, which turned to pneumonia, causing her death. Hazel was the second oldest daughter of the late Leon and Cora Stephan. She spent her childhood at the family home on the Ausable River at Stephan's Bridge, later living in Grayling and graduating from Grayling High school. About 1920 the family moved to Jackson, where she has since made her home. She leaves four sisters, Mrs. Zella White of Eaton Rapids, Mrs. Leo Bishop of Litchfield, Mrs. Gertrude Brinker of Jackson, and Mrs. Bessie Begner of Grand Rapids, many cousins, nieces and nephews to mourn her passing.
